THE LAW SCHOOL

(From September 1964 to December 1965)

I. ENROLLMENT

Opening enrollment in the fall of 1965 was 465, the largest in the history of the school. Entering class enrollment was 219. With the over-all aim of holding total enrollment to a maximum figure of 500 so long as we are in Manning Hall, we were forced last year to impose a control on the size of our entering classes in addition to that imposed by our minimum admission requirements. The result this year was a slight decrease in the size of our entering class from last year's record 236, despite an increase in the number of applications for 1965 over 1964. Retention of such a control, or revision of our admission requirements, is obviously required under the clearly established upward trend in applications for admission to this school, and to law schools generally.

The composition of our student body remains generally that of recent years in respect of residence and educational background of its members. Thus, the proportion of nonresidents of North Carolina in this year's entering class is 19 per cent, as against 25 per cent for the entering class in 1964, and 20 per cent for that of 1963. Nonresidents make up 21 per cent of the present student body, as against 20 per cent of last year's and 18 per cent of the previous year's. Of this year's entering class, 55 per cent had some or all of their undergraduate work at schools other than the University of North Carolina, as against 59 per cent of last year's. The recent upward trend in the proportion of undergraduate degree holders in the entering class continued, reaching a new high of 90 per cent this year, as against 89 per cent in 1964, and 87 per cent in 1963.

II. NEW LAW SCHOOL BUILDING

A hope expressed in last year's report, that the legislature would act favorably on the University's request for appropriation for a new law school building, was happily realized this spring. A generous appropriation, which we believe will allow construction of a fine facility, was made by the 1965 General Assembly. This was absolutely essential to the continued progress of the school. Manning Hall, built in 1922 and once substantially added to in 1952, could not much longer serve the needs of the university law school. To accommodate to the enrollment pressures already placed upon it, numerical quotas on entering classes have been necessitated for the first time, as indicated in the section on enrollment. During the last four years, nine new faculty offices have had to be constructed in space formerly utilized as a hallway, a seminar room, and a student typing room. Limitations of classroom numbers and sizes are necessitating more and more awkward class scheduling. And, of course, the building suffers the general inconveniences resulting from necessary additions not planned in original construction.

Planning for the new building, which will occupy a site adjoining the Institute of Government building, is in the preliminary architectural drawing stages. Three conferences with the architect have been held by the dean, the librarian, the faculty building committee chairman, and the university planning officer. Our basic aim in planning is to provide a facility which can, without additions, serve the projected needs of the next 10 to 15 years, making provision in the original plan for an orderly and integrally related addition of classrooms and offices to accommodate a student body of 750 for the long haul. While these figures may seem almost unbelievably large to most of the readers of this report, every indication which we have here, both from the standpoint of enrollment pressure and of the demand for legal services, indicate their essential validity and, indeed, conservatism.

Every attempt is being made in planning to take into account the experience of several law schools in the eastern part of the country which, in situations comparable or relatable to ours, have constructed new buildings in recent years. Visits have been made to these schools for inspection and consultation by law school representatives, the architect, and the university planning officer. While meeting deadlines in this kind of project is fraught with much uncertainty, we do have a target date, based on consultation with the architect, for occupancy in the fall of 1967.

Needless to say, we here are excited and enthusiastic about this project, and deeply appreciative of the provision made for it by the Legislature.

III. THE ADMINISTRATION

We are fortunate to have added Charles E. Dameron to our staff as Assistant Dean and Assistant Professor of Law, commencing with the fall semester 1965. Mr. Dameron is a 1961 honor graduate of this school, where he served on the staff of the Law Review and was a member of the Order of the Coif. Since graduation he has practiced law in Greensboro, where, just prior to joining our faculty, he was a partner in the firm Wharton, Ivey, Wharton and Dameron. He will devote part time to administration, taking over basic responsibility for the placement and scholarship programs of the school and assisting generally in other areas, and will initially teach a section of the basic courses in Real Property each semester.

IV. FACULTY

At the end of the 1964-65 academic year, Professor Thomas W. Christopher resigned from our faculty to accept the deanship at the New Mexico School of Law. We greatly regret the loss of this extremely valuable faculty colleague and warm friend as he now moves with our best wishes and fond regards into the leadership of this sister law school.

Professor Albert Coates is on leave of absence during the fall semester.

Turning to the plus side, we can report the addition this year of six new faculty members—the greatest number ever added to our staff at one time. The senior of these in rank, age and experience is Professor Frank R. Strong, B.A. 1929, LL.B. 1934, Yale, whose coming we consider to be of great significance not only to this school, but to legal education in this state and region generally. Professor Strong was for the twelve years immediately preceding his joining our faculty Dean of the College of Law of Ohio State University, where he had been a faculty member since 1935. Prior to that he had taught law at Iowa and economics at the University of Delaware. In 1960 he served as President of the Association of American Law Schools. We consider ourselves most fortunate that this greatly respected member of the law-teaching profession, binding an attachment first formed when he taught here as a visitor in our summer session of 1955, has now joined us on a permanent basis. He will teach a section of the course and a seminar in Constitutional Law, a seminar in Anti-Trust Law, and the course in Federal Jurisdiction.

In addition to Dean Strong, two others joined us from the faculties of other law schools. Associate Professor Walter D.

Navin, Jr., A.B. 1947, Cornell College, J.D. 1956, State University of Iowa, LL.M. 1964, N.Y.U., comes to us from the faculty of Washburn University School of Law and will teach sections of the courses in Contracts and Personal Property and work in the first year moot court program. Assistant Professor Michael P. Katz, A.B. 1959, LL.B. 1961, University of Cape Town, LL.M. 1964, Yale, comes to us from the University of Mississippi School of Law and will teach sections of the courses in Contracts and Criminal Law and a seminar in Criminal Procedure.

Two others, each with several years of experience in the practice of law, joined us from the graduate law program at Harvard and the teaching fellow program at Michigan, respectively. They are Assistant Professor Martin B. Louis, A.B. 1956, Princeton, LL.B. 1959, LL.M. 1965, Harvard, who will teach sections of the courses in Pleading and Trial Appellate Practice, a course in Anti-Trust Law, and assist with the moot court program; and Assistant Professor Philip C. Thorpe, A.B. 1954, Michigan State University, J.D. 1959, Michigan, who will teach sections of the courses in Torts and Evidence and assist with the moot court program.

The sixth addition, Assistant Dean and Assistant Professor Charles E. Dameron, has already been mentioned in the preceding section of this report.

Acting upon recommendations of the law faculty and the Chancellor, the Board of Trustees of the Consolidated University, in the spring of 1965, named as the first Graham Kenan Professors of Law Henry P. Brandis, Jr., and Frank W. Hanft. These professorships carry salary supplements funded by a most generous gift to the law school from a member of the Kenan family, for whose generosity we gratefully acknowledge our appreciation.

During the period covered by this report, the faculty were engaged in a wide variety of professional activities other than their normal teaching and law school and university committee work. A summary of the most important of these follows (excluding work done and publications appearing by new members of the faculty prior to their joining this faculty).

Alumni Distinguished Professor Herbert R. Baer had published by the Michie Company a 1965 supplement to his book, Admiralty Law of the Supreme Court; prepared the Evidence and Trial Appellate Practice sections of this Review's annual case law survey; and prepared a manuscript for and lectured at the N.C. Bar Association's Continuing Legal Education Institute on Appellate Practice held in Durham in October 1965.

Graham Kenan Professor Henry P. Brandis, Jr. prepared the section on Pleading and Parties in the annual case law survey; contributed book reviews to this Review and to the publication Church and State; participated as this school's representative in two conferences concerned with the Law School Admission Test; and in September of 1965 participated as designated commentator at a seminar of the Conference of Federal Trial Examiners in Washington, D. C.

Assistant Professor Donald F. Clifford contributed an article to the Colorado Law Review and represented this school at the 8th Annual Southern Trusts Conference of the American Bar Association in Memphis, Tennessee.

Professor John P. Dalzell represented the school at the annual meeting of the American Society of International Law in Washington, D. C., and at the Public International Law Session of the Hague Academy of International Law at the Hague.

Associate Professor Dan B. Dobbs contributed an article to the Texas Law Review and prepared portions of the section on Torts in this Review's annual survey of case law. He served as consultant to the North Carolina Courts Commission, contributing significantly to those portions of its draft of legislation dealing with civil jurisdiction allocations in the unified court system.

Associate Professor Ernest L. Folk III had published an annotated edition of the South Carolina Business Corporation Act, following up work which he performed as reporter to the legislative commission which drafted that act; contributed articles to this Review and to The Business Lawyer; continued as Reporter to the Delaware Corporation Law Revision Committee; served as consultant to the North Carolina Legislative Council in its work on the Uniform Commercial Code, preparing the manuscript on that portion of its study dealing with article VIII; and has recently been appointed consultant to the Georgia Corporation Law Revision Project. In addition to his teaching duties here, he is teaching Negotiable Instruments at Duke Law School this fall, continuing a tradition of visiting between our two schools to fill in for regular faculty members on leave from their parent institutions.

Graham Kenan Professor Frank W. Hanft continued his service as Chairman of the North Carolina General Statutes Commission. During the summer of 1965 he appeared on the program as a speaker at the Lawyers and Physicians Conference sponsored by the Methodist Church in Lake Junaluska, N. C.

Assistant Professor Michael P. Katz has contributed an article to the California Western Law Review since joining the faculty this fall.

Associate Professor and Law Librarian Mary W. Oliver is serving as Chairman of the N. C. Bar Association's Committee on Bar Notes and continued her active participation in professional law librarian associational activities, chairing two of the major committees of the American Association of Law Librarians, and one of the North Carolina Library Association.

Professor Fred B. McCall continued to serve as a member of the special drafting committee working for the General Statutes Commission on revision of the laws relating to the administration of estates. He begins this year his last year of part-time teaching prior to mandatory retirement, after serving on this faculty continuously since 1927.

Assistant Professor Martin B. Louis is serving as a member of the drafting committee on civil procedure working for the General Statutes Commission.

Associate Professor Walter D. Navin is presently working under contract with the West Publishing Company on Kansas Annotations to the Uniform Commercial Code, work commenced while teaching in Kansas.

Assistant Professor Kenneth L. Penegar contributed articles to this Review and to the University of Pennsylvania Law Review; participated by invitation in the Eleventh Annual Workshop in International Legal Studies in Berkeley, California; acted as consultant to the City of Durham's Program for Legal Services to the Poor; and represented this school at the annual meeting of the American Society of International Law.

Professor Daniel H. Pollitt contributed two articles to this Review and one to the Stanford Law Review; served during the summer of 1965 as special consultant to the House Committee on Labor and Education of the Congress of the U. S.; participated as a panelist at the National Conference on Fair Housing Laws in San Francisco; and appeared as speaker on the program of the University of Kentucky's Centennial Conference on Academic Freedom in the South.

Professor John W. Scott contributed an article to the Journal of Taxation; is contributing one to the winter issue of the Bulletin of the Tax Section of the American Bar Association; and appeared as a speaker on the program of the 1964 Regional Meeting of the American Bar Association in Atlanta. He is serving on the Board of Directors of the North Carolina School of the Arts.

Assistant Professor Richard M. Smith served as consultant to the North Carolina Legislative Council in its work on the Uniform Commercial Code, preparing the manuscript for that portion of its study dealing with Article IX; and is presently serving as a member of the drafting committee working for the General Statutes Commission on revision of the state's lien law.

Professor Frank R. Strong has contributed an article to the South Dakota Law Review which will be published this fall.

Professor Seymour W. Wurfel had published by the North Carolina Press his book based on Ford Foundation research in Colombia, Foreign Enterprise in Colombia: Laws and Policies; and represented the school at the Annual Meeting of the American Society of International Law and at the World Peace Through Law Conference both in Washington, D. C. He is presently serving as a member of the International Law Committee of the Association of American Law Schools.

The writer of this report continues as a member of the North Carolina Courts Commission and had published in January, 1965, a supplement to the two-volume second edition of McIntosh's North Carolina Practice and Procedure.

In addition to those meetings mentioned in the individual summaries, the school was represented by substantial delegations of the faculty at the annual meeting of the Association of American Law Schools in Chicago in December, 1964, at the annual convention of the N. C. Bar Association in Asheville in July, 1965, and at the annual meeting of the Southeastern Law Teachers Association in Asheville in August, 1965. Representatives of the school also attended the annual meeting of the American Law Institute, the annual convention of the American Bar Association, and the annual judicial conference of the U. S. Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit.

V. LIBRARY

This year again saw an appreciable increase in the number of volumes added to the Law Library collection due in part to a special appropriation and in part to the generosity of our alumni and friends. A total of 7,153 volumes was added to the Law Library of which 1,530 volumes were received as gifts. We are grateful for the interest and support of the donors and wish to acknowledge the gifts made by Andre Evans of Virginia Beach, Va., in memory of Alvin J. Eley of the class of 1924, Mr. George A. Long of Burlington, Mr. Wallace Murchison of Wilmington, Mr. Royal G. Shannonhouse of Rocky Mount, Mrs. M. T. Van Hecke of Chapel Hill and Mrs. Robert H. Wettach of Chapel Hill.

We have continued to add to our collection of microcard materials bringing our total holdings on microcard to over 41,000 cards.

As of June 30, 1965, the Library had a total of 102,928 cataloged volumes with some as yet uncataloged volumes not represented in this total.

The Law Library staff has continued to participate in professional activities serving as committee members in various professional organizations and as co-hosts, with Duke Law Library staff, to the Southeastern Chapter American Association of Law Libraries at a meeting in Chapel Hill and Durham.

VI. CURRICULUM

With the advent of Professors Strong and Louis, we have been able to restore to the regular curriculum a course and a seminar in Anti-Trust Law, which we were forced to drop temporarily last year. In a deliberate plan to emphasize the subject to the extent allowed by the interest and ability of our faculty and commensurate with the over-all program and purposes of the school, we now offer as a part of the regular curriculum five courses and seminars in one aspect or another of public and private international law. Despite some initial concerns about there being a sufficient amount of genuine student interest in this area to justify this degree of emphasis, the results to date from this very standpoint are extremely encouraging. In another move designed deliberately to give new emphasis to a specific whole area of our curriculum, we have added two seminars dealing with different aspects of criminal law and criminal procedure. Another new seminar added this year is that in Business Planning.

We continue our analysis and evaluation of our curriculum. The committee this year is considering the possibility of several fairly fundamental realignments of traditional materials in order to open up more electives to advanced students; the problem of working in more formal and systematic instruction in all aspects of the professional responsibility of the legal profession; and the problem of providing the best possible introductory and orientation type course for beginning students, to mention some of their principal concerns.

VII. SUMMER SCHOOL

During the summer session of 1965, our visiting professors were Professor Melvin G. Dakin of Louisiana State University (Income Taxation); Professor Thomas S. Currier of the University of Virginia (Federal Jurisdiction); Chancellor Collins J. Seitz of the Delaware Court of Chancery (Corporations); Professor Charles L. B. Lowndes of Duke University (Estate and Gift Taxation); and Professor Frank R. Strong (prior to the date of his permanent appointment) (Constitutional Law).

VIII. ACADEMIC ACHIEVEMENT

The masthead of this issue lists those students who are members of the editorial board and staff of the Law Review.

Other student scholastic honors were as follows:

Eleven students, on the basis of standing in the top 10 per cent of the class of 1965, were elected by the faculty to the Order of the Coif, a national honorary law society. These students were, in the order of their final standings: Robert A. Melott, Johnny M. Reece, Marvin E. Taylor, Jr., Arch T. Allen, III, Robert B. Long, Jr., Brown Hill Boswell, Ernest L. Mallard, Jr., Scott N. Brown, Jr., Timothy G. McCollum, Willis W. Whichard, and Ann H. Phillips. Of this group Taylor, Melott, Reece, Boswell and Mallard were also winners of the Chief Justice Walter Clark Awards, made annually to the five students who, on the basis of their cumulative records after five semesters, have the highest scholastic averages in their class.

The degree of LL.B. with Honors was awarded to Arch T. Allen, III, Brown H. Boswell, Scott N. Brown, Jr., Robert B. Long, Jr., and Marvin E. Taylor, Jr.

The Breckenridge Prize for excellence in tax law studies was awarded to Brown Hill Boswell, who likewise won the Block Improvement Award. The latter award, established by Mr. Norman Block of the Greensboro Bar in honor of the memory of his father, consists of a cash award of $300 to that senior who, having devoted himself most sincerely to his law studies during all his law school career, makes the most consistent improvement in academic work from the date of enrollment to the end of his fifth semester. The winner of these two awards is presently law clerk to Chief Judge Clement Haynesworth of the U. S. Court of Appeals for the Fourth Circuit.

The U. S. Law Week Award, a year's subscription to U. S. Law Week given to the senior making the most satisfactory progress during his senior year, was won by Arch T. Allen, III. The Lawyers Title Award, a $100 prize given to the senior demonstrating excellence in the study of real property law and selected at this school on the basis of the highest average grade on the three courses, Real Property, Titles and Future Interests, was won by Marvin E. Taylor, Jr.

IX. THE STUDENT BAR ASSOCIATION AND STUDENT ACTIVITIES

The officers of the Student Bar Association for the current academic year are: William M. Allen, Jr., President; Thomas J. White, III, Vice-President; James L. Nelson, Secretary; Thomas J. Bolch, Treasurer; and Charles P. Brown, Chief Justice of the Law School Honor Court.

The Association continued its orientation program for entering law students this year under the chairmanship of Thomas J. White, III; is publishing the Tar Heel Barrister under co-editors George C. Vick and Howard D. Cole; is cooperating with the administration in placement activities, through publication of the Placement Brochure under editor Raymond Russell and the preparation of student placement resumés under the direction of Gene Hafer; planned and supervised annual Law Day activities under the chairmanship of James Long; organizes law student participation in campus intramural athletics under the leadership of Gerald P. Spivey and Reginald W. Harrison; seeks to encourage organized student cooperation in library administration and use under chairman Leon Barber; organizes, allocates and supervises student use of study and typing desk space under chairman Otho L. Graham, Jr.; carries on throughout the year a program of bringing in outside speakers and making film presentations, under the chairmanship of Robert W. Johnson; and organizes and supervises periodic student social events including the reception during orientation for entering students and that for alumni on Law Day.

The writer takes this opportunity to express sincere appreciation for the quite substantial student contribution to the total program of the school which is summarized above. Much of this contribution is directly related to the effective administration of essential school programs; all of it is valuable in its impact on the over-all range of student life and growth during the law school experience. The current leadership is dedicated and is imaginatively seeking ways to contribute even more substantially to the effectiveness of the total educational experience of the students.

X. ALUMNI ACTIVITIES

The Law Alumni Association, without reducing its appropriation for smaller scholarships, carried forward its four major scholarships inaugurated in 1964—one for $1000 and three for $800—into their second year. The current budget, which allowed for the carrying of two classes on these major scholarships, carries a total of $11,000 for scholarships. Of this amount $8,600 is to be financed from Association annual dues, and the remainder from Law Foundation income. When the figure of $11,000 is compared with the $900 which just six years ago was the amount of scholarship money provided by our Association, the progress revealed is most encouraging.

As of this writing (October), some 800 alumni have paid approximately $8,700 in dues to the Association, by comparison to 1118 and $9,433 during all of 1964. Some 270 alumni and faculty members have contributed approximately $5,200 to the Foundation by comparison to 405 and $7,016 during all of 1964. Gifts to the Foundation from other sources, including substantial gifts from the families and friends of the late Kenan Professor Maurice T. Van Hecke and the late Professor Robert H. Wettach have brought the capital fund of the Foundation to more than $46,000 (exclusive of more than $200,000 now in the Graham Kenan and other special funds).

In addition to its primary support of the scholarship program, the Law Alumni Association also contributes substantially to financing the publication of the Tar Heel Barrister and the senior placement brochure, and (supplementing the modest State appropriation) to the financing of travel to professional meetings.

Between the annual meetings in 1964 and 1965 the officers of the Association and of the Foundation Council were as follows—the Association: Charles G. Rose, Jr., President; Ralph M. Stockton, Jr., First Vice President; Donald W. McCoy, Second Vice President; Mary W. Oliver, Secretary-Treasurer; Henry Brandis, Jr., Assistant Secretary-Treasurer; Foundation Council: Ralph M. Stockton, Jr., Chairman; Thomas A. Uzzell, Jr., Vice Chairman; James B. Garland, Secretary; Mary W. Oliver, Treasurer and Assistant Secretary.

XI. INSTITUTES FOR PRACTICING ATTORNEYS

Under the program of continuing legal education sponsored jointly by the North Carolina Bar Association and the law schools here and at Wake Forest and Duke, an Institute on Damages and Demonstrative Evidence was held here in the spring of 1965. The writer serves as a member of the Bar Association's Continuing Legal Education Committee which plans the over-all program. Professors Richard M. Smith and Kenneth L. Penegar are presently serving on planning sub-committees for future institutes. Professor Herbert R. Baer prepared a manuscript for and lectured at the fall 1965 Institute on Appellate Practice.

XII. BAR EXAMINATION RESULTS

In August of 1965, out of 86 of our 1965 graduating class taking the North Carolina Bar Examination, 82, or 95 per cent, passed. We are of course most gratified with this result.

This law school, together with the others of the state, continued to participate, by invitation of the Board of Law Examiners, in the annual post-examination critique and discussion of the current examination with the members of the Board.

XIII. PLACEMENT

In January, June, and August of 1965 we graduated a total of 101 students. Three have opened their own law offices, 44 are associated with other lawyers or law firms, 8 are clerks to judges, 3 are in government attorney positions, 4 are in legal positions with corporations, one is with a bank, one is taking graduate work, 4 are with the F.B.I., 15 are in miscellaneous positions in business, and the exact status of 7 is not known at this writing.

Two distinctive trends in placement which are discernible from our standpoint may be of interest to the profession. The first is that the prime time for contacting potential associates has now been pushed up to early and mid-fall of the year preceding graduation. The other is that an increasing amount of placement is being handled through contacts made in the employment of second-year law students during the summer preceding their final semester or year of school. We continue to solicit all possible assistance in placing our graduates in a market which seems to be more and more active and open.

XIV. THE LAW REVIEW

As anticipated in the last two years' reports in these pages, the cost of publishing this Review in the substantially larger volume which its recent issues have assumed has necessitated a raise in the subscription prices. Commencing with Volume 44, the price per copy is $1.75, the subscription price for the year, $6.00.

Last year, due largely to doubts had by both student editors and faculty members as to the relative value of the annual case law survey to the profession as against the absorption of student staff members' and editors' time, a decision was taken to abandon the survey as a student staff feature of the Review. When some protests were heard from persons outside the school whose judgment had to be respected, the decision was taken to keep the survey alive for at least another year through voluntary faculty contributions, in order to give opportunity for further evaluation. The result of this voluntary aspect was a reduction in the over-all coverage, though not, we surely trust, of the quality, of the survey in this year's Review. No firm long-range decision has been taken as to continuation, nor as to coverage, if the survey is continued. We earnestly solicit comments from Review subscribers on both points.

Frankly, our indecision results at least in part from a division of estimates here as to the extent of the survey's usefulness to bar and bench. We are certainly prepared to retain it, with fairly comprehensive subject-matter coverage, if indications are that it serves a useful purpose to a substantial number of the subscribers to the Review.

XV. SPEAKERS AND VISITORS

During the period covered by this report, the following visitors, to all of whom we are deeply grateful, have made appearances at the school to address particular classes, the student body, legal fraternities or other special groups of law students, or to participate in other ways in the programs of the school: Dr. Frank P. Graham, formerly President of the Consolidated University, presently of the U.N. Mediation staff; Hon. Collins J. Seitz, Chancellor, Delaware Court of Chancery; Hon. Edwin Gill, Treasurer of the State of North Carolina; Hon. George Randall, Director of the N. C. Department of Prisons; Hon. Dan K. Edwards, Solicitor of the 10th Superior Court Solicitorial District; Mr. S. F. Forester, Vice-President, Wachovia Bank and Trust Co.; Hon. William E. Comer, of the Greensboro Bar; Braxton Shell, Esq., of the Greensboro Bar; Mr. Robert Allen, Assistant Director, N. C. Department of Prisons; Hon. N. F. Ransdell, Chairman, N. C. Board of Paroles; Mr. Roy Sandlin, Parole Officer, N.C. Board of Paroles; Mr. A. F. Sigmon, Training Supervisor, N.C. Probation Commission; Prof. Frank Schwentker, School of Business Administration, U.N.C. at Chapel Hill; Mr. Milton Loomis, Trust Officer, Central Carolina Bank and Trust Co., Chapel Hill, N.C.; Mr. Robert Clodfelter, Trust Officer, Wachovia Bank and Trust Co.; Prof. John Sanders, Director, Institute of Government; Col. Kenneth Crawford, U.S. Army, J.A.G.C.; Professor Jack Behrman, School of Business Administration, U.N.C. at Chapel Hill.

XVI. DEDICATION

It is our sincere hope that this school may continue steadily to improve its capabilities for training law students to first-rate competence in the practice of the legal profession and for inculcating in them deepened awareness of their professional responsibility as they serve on the bar and the bench, in the business communities, and in the governments of state and nation; and that the role of the School in legal education may reflect increasing credit upon the great University and State of which it is proudly a part.

DICKSON PHILLIPS, Dean
